Is Spiritualism Purely Bunk?

New York, N.Y., April 9.—According to "people who want to be fooled," and that for 11 years he had done just that, Mino Pecore, "Mystic," who Sir Arthur Conan Doyle admitted won him over to Spiritualism, Wednesday night declared that his seances "were all a fake."

"I've never seen a ghost, and do not believe anyone else has," he said. "I'm sick and tired of giving seances and having Spiritualists reap the profit. When ghosts appear at my seances they are Mino Pecore of the flesh."

To prove his point, he allowed himself to be "secretly" bound, then freed himself and wrote two messages. One was "from Doyle," and the other "from Houdini." The handwriting compared favorably with authentic signatures of the famous men.

In addition, Pecore passed on two "messages" from the dead persons to newspapermen present, and also had "ghost hands" play an accordion.

The demonstration was given in the apartment of Joseph Dunninger, chairman of a committee named by a scientific magazine to expose false Spiritualists. Dunninger said more than $5,000,000 was spent annually in New York alone on Spiritualistic work.

He added: "Conan Doyle had implicit faith in Mino, and wrote that Spiritualism rises or falls by him."

Banks and Farm Relief

The Manitoba House have passed rural legislation to give protection to farmers and others now facing "eviction." The act "to facilitate the adjustment of debt," means, simply, that these people will be given an opportunity of postponing debt payment and in the interim, of remaining on their farms and in their dwellings.

That such legislation was passed rapidly reflects a certain amount of credit upon the Manitoba legislature, for rushing through a relief measure without the customary delay, but that such speed was necessary is a sad illustration of the fact that the Western farmers are in most cases justified in the agitation they are causing for an alteration in present conditions.

At the present time the Prime Minister, Western delegates and leading Canadian bankers are conferring upon this question of debt repayments and rates of interest. The Manitoba incident should bring to this meeting an increased realization of the fact that a more smoothly working arrangement and a better understanding of relative positions are essential.

The farmers, on the one hand, view the Eastern banking interests as adamant in their demand for rates of interest that are unreasonably high. The bankers, on the other hand have many other considerations to face as well as that of farmer welfare. The banks are not—as many luckless debtors at the present time seem inclined to suppose—charitable institutions. They are business houses which hold in trusteeship vast sums of money not their own. Upon the safe investment of the sums and upon the wisdom of each bank's policy depend the prosperity of that bank depend. Relief, if it is still needed from the banks can be given only on a scale compatible with business. The bank as an institution with its reputation continually at stake, cannot afford to take chances on any farmer, however sure his need and however much justification exists for his indebtedness. It is a matter of business, not of abstract justice, and the banks must be adamantly businesslike to survive.

It is to be hoped that the meeting at present in progress will clear the air of misunderstandings in this connection, that banking officials will make clear to what precise extent interest rates may be decreased without impairing the financial integrity of the banks, and that, if the need for organized assistance is shown to be still significant, steps will be taken (through the medium, if necessary, of organizations, other than Canadian banks) to avert the need for emergency legislation such as that passed by the Manitoba Legislature.

Wheat Quota Proposed

Unable to accede to Mr. Bennett's demand for a direct preferential tariff on Canadian wheat at the Imperial Conference last fall, the British government announced its intention to bring forward some plan under which wheat grown in the Empire would receive preferential treatment in Great Britain. This has crystallized in a proposal to establish a wheat quota to assist British farmers.

Despatches from the Old Country yesterday indicated that the quota proposal has aroused strong hostility from the millers and that the Labor party is divided in its attitude. The millers are opposed because they declare they will be compelled to use 15 per cent. British wheat. They take the ground that any plan to increase the price of British-grown wheat means a subsidy and nothing else and they insist on liberty to buy in the cheapest market. This is a purely selfish attitude but is supported by the famous free trade mouth-piece the Manchester Guardian, which says:

"It stands to reason that if millers must use 15 per cent. of British wheat at double the price of Canadian or Argentine, their flour will be more expensive than flour milled exclusively from foreign wheat; consequently bakers will buy Canadian flour instead of British flour, and farmers will be as far as ever from their artificial price level. The idea that the quota will achieve the miracle of enriching the farmer at nobody's expense cannot bear a moment's inspection."

This is immediately raised the old cry of "hands off the loaf!" even when the primary object of the proposed quota system is to promote the welfare of British agriculture, and the secondary objective is to divert more British's wheat market to Empire-grown grain. The millers and the free traders insist on buying from the cheapest source. They refuse to let either Empire sentiment or concern for a languishing industry at home influence their views.

A recent statement conveyed the information that of the wheat milled in Great Britain, 13 per cent is home grown, 44 per cent is supplied by the overseas dominions and 43 per cent from foreign countries. The British farmer has been able to dispose of his wheat, but only at current prices. He seeks a fixed price above the world levels.

So far as Canada is concerned, establishment of a quota system would not assure any price guarantee. Provided the quota system can be worked out in detail with the object of dividing the British market into definite percentages the only advantage to Canada would be the assurance of a certain market for a portion of its crop. But, here again, it may be presumed there will be strings attached. Britain will not punish Argentina, an excellent customer, for the benefit of Canada and Australia unless the latter are prepared to make some substantial concessions in return. This may take the form of a request for the purchase of an equivalent value in British manufactured goods. It is fairly evident that Great Britain, if and when it occurs, will adopt the quota system primarily in her own interest, and not for the purpose of boosting the price of wheat to benefit the overseas producers.

The Railroads

And the Trucks

For some years the railways in Canada, the United States and Great Britain have been faced with a lessening in revenue from passenger traffic on short hauls, gradually increasing loss as the number of motor-cars grows, due to the automobile, not only in the hands of the private owner but in the hands of those who, for charges closely approximating those of the railways, carry in buses passengers from point to point.

This, and the service offered by bus lines is meant particularly, is apparently a situation which cannot be bettered from the point of view of the railroad as the service, stopping at closely located points to pick up or drop passengers is one with which the steam roads would find it impossible to compete, and it is unquestionably more pleasant in warm weather at any rate, to skim along the highways through the choicest farm lands and enter the cities upon boulevard streets than it is to travel in a passenger coach on rails through what is, in the older sections of the country at least, usually a less pleasing part of the countryside and enter the cities through crowded railway yards with one's view of the black walls of factories or warehouses obscured by smoke and soot.

While this situation is serious from the standpoint of the railway it is by no means the most serious phase of the competition growing through the use of large vans and freight trucks upon the highways for the transportation of loads of freight, large or small, between points already well served by the railways.

This competition if it is allowed to go unchecked, will result in serious losses to the transportation companies with resultant drastic cuts in service at no direct benefit to the people of the country who transfer their freight shipments from the steel rails and rolling stock of the railways to the rubber-tired, gasoline-driven freight vans of private individuals and the highways built, maintained and paid for by the taxpayers of the various provinces. It may be said, of course, that the public is entitled to competition from other forms of transportation such as buses, trucks, etc., but, insofar as can be seen, the railroads of the country will provide the backbone of transportation for many years and such competition as that given by freight truck drivers over public highways, with a comparatively small investment in rolling stock and no charge or at best a small charge (license fee etc.) for the use of the public highways, can scarcely be described as fair by even the most pronounced railway critic.

The railways are in a position where they have to take drastic steps to protect themselves. Train crews and thousands of men engaged in the past by the rail companies have within the past few months been laid off, and prospects are that greater cuts in staffs will be necessary.

We would not be surprised if in the near future freight service on this line will be cut down to one, or at the most, two freights a week, and it is not unlikely that our express service will be greatly curtailed. In Lacombe, railway men have been laid off, and others may follow, and this state of affairs is directly due to the public's patronage of the trucks and buses.

Railway men in the larger centres have got together to protest against the use of the truck for transporting freight, and have agreed to not purchase from merchants who patronize them.

It is up to everyone interested in the development of our country to give serious thought to this question. The competition is unfair from every angle.

News From the West Country

Joe Marshall, well known Rimbey old timer, suffered painful injuries in an accident on Wednesday afternoon last, when he was knocked down and run over by an auto truck driven by Frank Andrews, of Gilby. Mr. Marshall was taken to St. Paul's hospital, where it was found that seven ribs on his left side were broken, besides the shock received. Mr. Andrews was delivering a load of hogs to the stockyards, and while watching a restive team that threatened to run away, took his eyes off the road. Mr. Marshall was walking along with his head bent to protect his face against the dust and the accident happened before either of the men realized the danger. Mr. Marshall is doing as well as can be expected, which will be gratifying news to his many friends.

Art Cumberland, of Leedale, had several ribs broken, and his shoulder and hand bruised in a runaway accident in Rimbey on Wednesday last. He was hauling a load of hogs to the stockyards, and when just south of the elevators, he dropped a line and stepped to the ground to retrieve it. The horses took this opportunity of breaking away, and Mr. Cumberland was thrown heavily to the ground and dragged for quite a distance. He was taken to St. Paul's hospital, where he received treatment.

The marriage of Miss Martha Burdinsky, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. G. Burdinsky, of Lavoie, to Const. E. James, A.P.P., of Rimbey, took place at Red Deer on Saturday, April 4th. Mr. and Mrs. James are residing in Rimbey and are receiving the best wishes of many friends.

Mr. and Mrs. A. B. MacDonald have bought the Weiss summer cottage at Meridian Beach, Gull Lake. The cottage is one of the finest on the shores of the lake, and should afford many pleasant hours to the new owners.
